Synopsis

Boston, 1920. Two Italian immigrants, Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, are accused of armed robbery and murder. It is soon evident that the two defendants are innocent, but American justice wants to condemn them for the simple reason that they are anarchists and Italians. The defence efforts to dismantle the fragile accusations are in vain and Sacco and Vanzetti are condemned to death. In spite of the fact that mobilisation in favour of the two Italian immigrants spreads worldwide and becomes more and more intense, Sacco and Vanzetti are executed in August 1927
